Company: Akamai

Location: Israel

Category: other-general

Are you excited about detecting and mitigating the latest cyber & fraud attacks?

Would you enjoy handling massive data sets, solving hard problems, and having a deep passion for security?

Join our Global Web Security group!

Our team is part of the Cloud Security organization, responsible for the technologies powering Akamai's security products and protecting some of the world's major internet brands. Working with other development teams, we design and create highly scalable solutions.

Shape internet security

You will be the forefront of cyber defense, keenly tracking, analyzing, and countering threats in fraud and account abuse, including credential stuffing, account takeovers, identity theft, account opening abuse, carding attacks and more. Your primary goal is to enhance our products' security measures by devising innovative detection methods and integrating them effectively.

As a Security Researcher , you will be responsible for:

Diving into the latest cyber threats, spot trends in data, and figure out how adversaries operate.

Tweaking and improving our risk-detecting tech, plus playing around with ML to keep us ahead of the curve.

Collaborating with data science and engineering to make our security tools even sharper.

Gathering and analyzing attack data using Pandas and PySpark to provide solid intelligence and uncovering emerging attack trends.

Sharing the cool stuff you find in blogs.

Do what you love

To be successful in this role you will:

Have proven experience in security and fraud research with a good grasp of web application security.

Be adept in statistical analysis and machine learning methodologies.

Be proficient with SQL, Spark (Scala), and Python's data analysis tools.

Demonstrate exceptional analytical with a keen interest in technological advancements.

Have experience with JavaScript, browser fingerprinting, user analytics, and biometrics.

Work in a way that works for you
